Life is 'batter' with pancakes! Shrove Tuesday celebrated across Haldimand

HALDIMAND—If The Haldimand Press community calendar listings in It's A Date for February 13, 2024 were any indication, the Haldimand community loves its pancakes! Several community groups shared their event details for celebrating Shrove Tuesday, also known as Pancake Tuesday, and The Press made it out to three events in Hagersville, Caledonia, and Cayuga for a look at the action last Tuesday evening. Many of the annual events are used as fundraisers for a variety of groups, several church events may lean more into the religious traditions of the evening, but all participants were sure to get a belly full of tasty breakfast for dinner and a heart full of fun and friendship. Final funding push begins for new Hagersville facility

By Mike Renzella
The Haldimand Press

HAGERSVILLE — After over two years of fundraising, public engagement, and design upgrades, the Hagersville Library + Active Living Centre is closer than ever to being a reality, with community fundraising efforts zeroing in on their $2 million target and the ground breaking just "months away," according to a County release.

Fundraising Committee Chair and former Ward 4 Councillor Tony Dalimonte is thrilled to see the project moving forward.

"We want the facility to be as special as it can be," said Dalimonte.

He noted that Community and Development Services Manager Mike Evers had suggested to him that contractors "should be on site in May, starting to make preparations, putting up the sign.... It will take about 18 months or so to build this."

He noted the importance of remembering that along with being a sports and library hub, the facility will replace the former Hagersville Community Centre, with funds from the centre's sale supporting the new facility.

"To make that facility as rentable as possible, you've got to have all the amenities in there to compete with other halls in the county, and for people to use it as a destination for a wedding, a corporate event, whatever the case may be," explained Dalimonte. "That requires things like upgraded acoustics, the things you would use to transform the main hall into a wedding venue, or a place to have a Christmas party, or a major corporate event. Our work continues."

Family Day fun all over community

HALDIMAND—On Monday, February 19, 2024, hundreds of families across the county took some time to celebrate Family Day. The Dunnville Optimists held a mini winter carnival that included food and fun for children of all ages. As part of the fun, (left) Rylan Szakal (6) of Dunnville and volunteer Thomas Mander (13) of Grimsby show off their hula hoop skills (Haldimand Press photo by Valerie Posthumus). Meanwhile, Selkirk saw the 40th Heritage Day event from the North Erie Shore Historical Society. A steady crowd of visitors enjoyed displays and demonstrations, including antique toys, tools, trains, historical groups, and more. Above, Grant Stengel makes quick work of peeling an apple using an 1893 apple peeler that was used in the former apple drying plant in Selkirk. Flipping fun means Pancake Tuesday was no flop!

By Tara Lindemann
The Haldimand Press

HALDIMAND—What is Shrove Tuesday and why pancakes and carnivals? The Press consulted five Christian denominations to find out.

Shrove Tuesday is a Christian festival celebrated worldwide and differently, but what is the same: it's always the Tuesday before the start of Lent. Lent is when Christians temporarily renounce personal luxuries in memory of Jesus journeying the desert to fast and pray for 40 days.

'Shriving' is a term to describe the imposing of a penance, where Christians would go to the church on Shrove Tuesday to confess their sins and be cleansed, or shriven. And while the exact date of Shrove Tuesday changes from year to year, it's always on a Tuesday, and always 47 days before Easter Sunday. Depending on the church or parish you attend, Canada, the United Kingdom, Ireland, and Australia will typically celebrate Pancake Day.

Historically during the season of Lent, participants would sacrifice their pallets and give up the good stuff – like dairy, fat, and sugar – so this was the last day of binging on those goodies, and pancakes have those very ingredients.

The tradition started in 1445 in Buckinghamshire, England when a woman lost track of time whilst making pancakes. She ran straight toward the church bells, warning that Shrove Tuesday service was to begin. She arrived to the church, pan in hand and pancake within.

Now, such as seen throughout Haldimand, the day has turned into an opportunity to fundraise and to commune through pancakes and all the fixings.

The day is celebrated differently in other parts of the world, with one commonly known example being New Orleans' Mardi Gras – which is French for 'Fat Tuesday.'

For many people, Mardi Gras means penitential time begins at sundown, but ultimately the party stops at midnight, with an elaborate parade of police officers walking down the streets followed by street cleaners, as Lent begins at the stroke of midnight.

CAYUGA—Cayuga Secondary School held a pancake supper Tuesday, February 13, 2024 in the school's cafeteria. Students prepared pancakes, sausage, juice, and cupcakes for those who attended. Student Council Teacher Advisor Jonathan Mann shared, "The pancake supper is an annual fundraiser that supports two efforts: some students use their personal ticket sales for our upcoming Europe trip to Switzerland and Italy on March Break. Others are directing funds towards the Global Student Leadership Conference that is occurring in April at Blue Mountain – a three-day leadership retreat involving 600 students from around the province. Those who help out also get a portion of the walkup sales, after costs are covered. The event is also a great chance for students to extend their leadership skills in organizing the logistics of the event and customer/client service and sales skills." Above, Aliyah Elfner, Madison Brookes, Maddy Los, and Alexis Reid get ready for the rush to serve pancakes.

CALEDONIA — On February 13, St. Paul's Anglican Church in Caledonia opened their doors to offer pancakes, sausage, and various toppings for a minimal price. "We have been serving pancakes to the community for 40 years," boasts church member and volunteer Gail Bell of the annual Shrove Tuesday event. Gardens abuzz for youth project

Young gardeners invited to join Pollinator Pals planting sessions

By Tamara Botting
The Haldimand Press

TOWNSEND/DUNNVILLE—Aspiring gardeners are being invited to give their green thumbs a workout as Haldimand-Norfolk REACH is once again expanding its pollinator gardens.

"We're trying to connect kids with nature, as nature is a really great way to help kids to self-regulate," said Nancy Schuur, Group Services and Prevention Worker, who is spearheading the Pollinator Pals initiative. This is the second year for this targeted prevention program within the agency.

"Gardening is such a great tool to keep the mind busy ... with focusing on the flowers, they're not thinking about their worries or anything else," Schuur said.

Last year, two pollinator-friendly gardens were installed: one at HN REACH's 101 Nanticoke Creek Parkway, Townsend location, in partnership with Grand River Home Hardware in Caledonia and the Haldimand Horticultural Society; and the other at 110 Ramsey Drive, Dunnville, in partnership with GrandErie Home Hardware and Dunnville Horticultural Society.

"Every year, we'll be adding to these gardens," Schuur said.

There are two planting days scheduled, on June 5 in Townsend and June 19 in Dunnville. Both sessions will run from 4-5 p.m. and are open to any youths ages 7-11 years old.

"Every child that joins will help us plant some flowers; they'll also help us create some water vessels for insects and birds," Schuur said.

She added that pollinator gardens are important because "right now, we are having a crisis with our bee population. And actually, southern Ontario is in the migrant pathway for the monarch butterflies, which also need a lot of help. These gardens can act as landing spots for the monarch butterflies in their migration, but they also create pollinator places for bees where they are safe and they can pollinate and hopefully flourish."

By teaching participants about the ecological role pollinators fulfill alongside a lesson about the importance of self-care, Schuur said, "This teaches the kids to not only be conscious of themselves, but also the environment around them; to be sustainable in their mental health is to be sustainable within the environment."

Schuur said the hope with Pollinator Pals is to get participants to come out each year, while also adding new gardeners to the group.

This year, as a special gift, participants at the planting sessions will receive a crocheted bee, made by Sam Overholt from HN REACH's Youth Mental Health Alliance.

Hagersville Library & Active Living Centre to break ground this summer

By Mike Renzella
The Haldimand Press

HAGERSVILLE—The long-in-development Hagersville Library and Active Living Centre got a big update last week, revealing July as the scheduled start date for construction on the multi-use facility originally spearheaded by former Ward 4 Councillor Tony Dalimonte.

Mike Evers, Haldimand's General Manager of Community and Development Services, gave a comprehensive overview of where the project currently stands, and a timeline of what residents of the area can expect next: "(It's) nearing the finish line from the desktop, design, and planning end of things. We're very close to being at that point where we enter into the ground-breaking and construction phase of the project."

He said that staff have been busy over the past year and a half.

"That includes completing all of the architectural building plans, that was a milestone achieved in early May. The site plan process and the civil engineering plan have been completed. The site plan has been approved. That was also in early May," said Evers.

"As a team we've done a few facility visits to start to generate ideas and figure out some opportunities as it relates to programming for the active living centre in particular. Those visits will continue over the next few months."

Evers noted that the building permit application has been submitted, calling it a significant milestone in the process.

"We're hoping to get the tender out in the next one to two weeks. That really wraps up the design stage of the project," he continued. "Once the tender is awarded, which we're hoping to do in July, that's when the real fun starts to happen."

Once the ground is broken and construction is underway, residents can expect that process to last through to roughly October 2025.

"That gives you a good sense of the construction timeline. It's lengthy, but it's a big project with lots of complexities to the site and the inner workings of the facility," Evers concluded.

A staff report provided further information on the many wheels spinning behind the scenes to bring the project to fruition, noting that the community fundraising campaign has accumulated $1.7 million in raised/committed funds.

It also notes that occupancy of the site is anticipated to be, at earliest, late summer 2025. Program development usage schedules for the facility, which will also host private events in addition to offering community services, will be factored into the 2025 operating budget.

Stay tuned for more updates as they develop.

Using nature as a tool to help kids to self-regulate

Schuur explained that the committee members are area youths who meet once a month and share their experiences interacting with local mental health systems, which in turn helps to guide the work of HN REACH.

Schuur noted Overholt's volunteering to make the bees for the Pollinator Pals program was "quite the contribution; we were so impressed with her work and her dedication to it."

There's no cost to participate in the Pollinator Pals program, but pre-registration is required. The crocheted bees will be distributed while supplies last. To register, call 519-587-2441, ext. 283.

For those who are unable to make it out for one of the planting days, or who are too old, there may still be an opportunity to get involved in the project.

Last year, Schuur took on the care of the gardens after the planting sessions, but this year, "We may be looking at developing some sort of youth group that's into gardening that would want to do that."

HN REACH offers a wide range of programs and services for area children, youth, and their families, including for autism, mental health, youth justice, and developmental services. For more information about what's offered, visit hnreach.on.ca.

'This is a day I'll never forget' says graduating centenarian

By Tamara Botting
The Haldimand Press

CALEDONIA—It's thanks to a Haldimand Press article that Doris Young can officially say that she's a high school graduate.

When reporter Olivia Snyder was interviewing Young for an article to mark her 100th birthday, Snyder asked the centenarian what her biggest regret in life was. Young said it was that she hadn't been able to graduate from high school.

One of Young's daughters, Ruthanne Spence, explained how Young's asthma was exacerbated by a severe chalk dust allergy. In her final year of high school, Young was out sick the month of January, which she worked hard to make up for back in class, but when she fell sick again in May, and that stretched into June, "she didn't get caught up enough to write her exams," Spence said. This meant Young couldn't graduate.

Kathy Adams, also Young's daughter, knew her mom didn't graduate but said, "I never thought it was that important to her" until she mentioned it in the interview.

Once the family realized how much it meant to Young, Spence, a retired teacher with the Hamilton Wentworth District School Board, got to work. Since Spence had spent many years working in the Student Services department, which in part works to remove barriers for students to help them successfully learn and eventually graduate, she was confident something could happen.

"Today, so many stops are pulled out to help students graduate," Spence said, noting if her mom had been in high school today, she wouldn't have encountered chalk dust in the first place, and even if she was sick and unable to attend class in person, there would be options for virtual study, and/or she would be able to sit her exams at a different time.

"I saw an opportunity to fulfill the dream of another potential graduate," Spence said, adding that age wasn't a concern.

She contacted her former colleague, Kevin Graham, Superintendent of Education with Grand Erie District School Board (GEDSB), and a short while later, got word back that the graduation was a go.

Spence said when she told her mom what was happening, "this look of disbelief and joy came over her face."

On May 21 there was a special commencement ceremony held at River Heights Elementary School, which had been the high school in 1943 when Young was supposed to graduate.

During the ceremony, Spence noted that for a high school graduation, "May is a little bit early in most situations," however, "in this case, it's about 80 years late."

Young, clad in the blue cap and gown that her fellow scholars wore, said, "I never thought they'd go to all this" as she took in the crowd of well-wishers, the balloons, and her diploma. "The right person got working on it, I guess."

Young said that while her life had its ups and downs, "I've got lots of good memories; that's all that matters now.... This is a day I'll never forget."

She added that she hoped her graduating at the age of 100 would encourage those who are still in school now.

"Get your education; it's far more important now," she said.

When presenting Young with her diploma, GEDSB Director of Education JoAnna Roberto said, "Doris, you have exemplified what it means to have many accomplishments in life."

She noted that when students graduate, it's common to wish them the best for their future, but in Young's case, "Your future is here; you're surrounded by your children, your grandchildren, your great-grandchildren."

Susan Gibson, Chair of GEDSB, added that Young "exemplifies the value of lifelong education.... Your journey inspires us all."
